

New Blog Post Series Recognizes Family Caregivers

Date:

Tuesday, November 29, 2022

National Family Caregivers Month may be wrapping up, but at PolicyLab, our commitment to caregivers stretches well beyond November. In a recent blog post series, several of our researchers illustrate just a few of the ways we are working to recognize and lift up caregivers as they support children in their lives.

Take a look at the posts in the series to explore how research, policy and programs can help the whole family thrive:

- Supporting Caregivers Impacted by Substance Use Disorders: A Conversation with Pennsylvania Family Support Alliance Kali Hackett, MSW, MPH
- Recognizing and Supporting Kinship Caregivers: A New National Strategy Offers Opportunities Rebecka Rosenquist, MSc, and Aliyah Jones
- Addressing Postpartum Depression Through Social Media Ellen McQuaid, MPH, and James Guevara, MD. MSHP
- Child Tax Credits Could Help Fight Hunger in the United States Zoe Bouchelle, MD, and Aditi Vasan, MD, MSHP

For more related research and resources, check out our Intergenerational Family Services Research Portfolio landing page, read our portfolio overview brief or watch our portfolio overview video.

Senbagam Virudachalam MD, MSHP Faculty Member

Jennifer Whittaker PhD, MUP Research Scientist