Have you noticed a few new changes on PolicyLab's website?

It has been about six years since we launched our new website, which debuted PolicyLab's research portfolios. The research and policy landscapes have changed significantly in that time, and PolicyLab's research has evolved as studies have ended, new researchers have joined us, and new, exciting projects have launched. To reflect more accurately the research projects currently being conducted at the center, we have updated two of our portfolio names:

- The "Health Care Coverage, Access & Quality Portfolio" is now the "Population Health Sciences Portfolio."
- The "Intergenerational Family Services Portfolio" is now the "Family & Community Health Portfolio."

You'll also notice some updated subcategories that fall under each research portfolio to help direct you to work aligned with your interests. We hope these changes will allow our website visitors to navigate to our researchers' work more easily.
