Date:

Tuesday, August 06, 2024

PolicyLab is excited to share our 2024 Impact Report, our annual report highlighting examples of how our center took an evidence-to-action approach to improve children's health and well-being during the past year.

In the report, you'll see examples of our faculty and professionals' innovative work—from novel methods to reduce youth suicide in primary care to streamlining communications between home and doctors' offices to support families with young children. You'll also hear from PolicyLab partners and team members like Doug Strane, whose team is exploring pediatric underinsurance to better understand health care access and affordability.

Explore the report to learn more about PolicyLab, the impact of our work across research, community engagement, and policy, our reach as a center, and how we can collaborate to improve the health and well-being of children, teens and their families.
