

Supporting Caregivers and Families Impacted by Substance Use

Date:

May 2025

Download Material

At PolicyLab, we recognize that individuals impacted by substance use who are also caregivers of children need unique supports that are responsive to family context and experience.

PolicyLab researchers are looking into programs and policies aimed at supporting families with a caregiver experiencing substance use. In current work, we are focused on key three areas:

- Evaluating community-based programs that support the well-being of families impacted by substance use.
- Examining trends in prenatal and postpartum opioid use, treatment access and retention, and program availability.
- Advancing policies and practices that enhance equitable access to care, reduce structural barriers and address intersecting challenges to family well-being.

In this project spotlight brief, we share examples of projects and publications related to this ongoing work.

Authors:

Whittaker J, Garcia S

Topics

Maternal-Child Health

Public Systems & Community Programs

Related Content

The Role of Child Care in Family-centered Approaches to Treatment for Substance Use Disorder
Strategies to Improve Connections to Services for Families Affected by Perinatal Substance Use
Innovations in Evidence-based Home Visiting Intended to Engage and Support Families Impacted by Opioid Use Disorder: Three Case Studies from Pennsylvania Pilot Programs