Family & Community Health: A Snapshot of a PolicyLab Research Portfolio

Download Material

Caregivers' health shapes children's health. That's why we lead research on how systems can better help meet caregivers' and families' needs.

Our unique position within a pediatric health system allows us to collaborate with community partners to bridge health, education, public benefit and other family-serving systems. We help ensure that they can proactively meet caregivers' and families' needs. And we rigorously evaluate the outcomes of health services and programs to ensure they work for families.

We also work across PolicyLab's four other research portfolios to collaborate on innovative projects that examine and bolster the intersection between pediatric health care and public health systems and programs.
